A few specific guidelines to consider in preparing either type of abstract follow: # Consult the journal's instructions for authors. # Follow the journal's specific sideheadings when preparing a structured abstract. # Do not begin the abstract by repeating the title. # Do not cite references. # Provide absolute results for main outcome measures (eg, report incidence rates rather than reporting only relative risks). In addition, provide confidence intervals whenever possible (if not, provide P values) (see , Study Design and Statistics, The Manuscript: Presenting Study Design, Rationale, and Statistical Analysis). # Include major terms and describe databases and study
