The manufacturer's name for a drug (or other product) is called a proprietary name or brand name.(p15) Proprietary names use initial capitals, with a few exceptions (eg, pHisoHex). JAMA and the Archives Journals do not use the trademark symbol (TM) or the registered trademark symbol (®) because capitalization indicates the proprietary nature of the name (see also , Legal and Ethical Considerations, Intellectual Property: Ownership, Access, Rights, and Management, Trademark). The International Trademark Association has information about specific trademarks and may be reached at <http://www.inta.org/> or International Trademark Association, 1133 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10036.
